

- The Korean government operates a vaccine injury compensation system

- This program is part of its responsibility to ensure public safety (herd immunity), particularly for adverse effects that may unavoidably occur following COVID-19 vaccination.

- Based on the principle of social solidarity, the government compensates individuals who suffer adverse effects as a result of this public health action.

- The government socializes the risk of adverse effects—a risk that is unknowable in advance—and ensures that the burden is not borne solely by the individual but is shared collectively by society.

Figure S1. Images of the experimental group video (high construal level).

https://doi.org/10.24171/j.phrp.2024.0354